Subject: Re: Pacific Northwest LNG on Lelu Island

I strongly object to the corrupt Petronas LNG project being approved for Lelu Island and area. I believe there is enough science and the word of over 130 scientists as well as those of the Russian contingency to make even the simplest person understand how absolutely insane the installation of this project would be in such an environmentally sensitive area. The fact that it was even considered and allowed to be built to the point it is, is all due to a corrupt Conservative Harper gov't. But it can still be avoided. Desecration and destruction of a pristine area that salmon use as a transitional point and a nursery, speaks for itself as a good enough reason to put this all to an end. In addition the incredible impact on land and water, the fact that little Lelu Island would be one of the largest sources of greenhouse gas emissions in Canada goes against everything our new Prime Minister has promised to Canadians. Enough is enough.

My thought is that if those making the final decision were promised that a severe punishment would be handed down to them should they approve any project that created harm, destruction, negative changes to the environment including air, water and land, in and around Lelu Island, and impacted First Nations and locals in a substantially negative manner - there would be not one person supporting this project. And that in turn should tell you that, in fact, there is no one that believes there won't be severe and irreparable damage done.

Stop the corporate and political greed from coming into our communities. Although Harper has left some appointed minions in strategic positions, do not let his tale of destruction of the environment continue.

Sincerely,

Justin Timalon
